Re: Request for information
Liquidating Transactions

Dear Ms. Czernin;

Reference is made to your facsimile transmission of January 18, 2002 relative to the ability of unlicensed broker-dealers and unlicensed agents to effect liquidating transactions in New Hampshire.

New Hampshire does not have any de minimus provisions to allow a limited number of securities transactions.

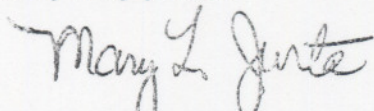

Please refer to NH RSA 421-B:6 and 421-B:30, which are the licensing requirements and scope of chapter respectively. A "liquidating" transaction is a "sell order" and therefore only licensed broker-dealers and New Hampshire licensed agents may effect sell orders.

New Hampshire accounts should not be transferred to a broker-dealer who is not licensed in the state, and when a customer moves to New Hampshire and the broker-dealer is not licensed in New Hampshire, the broker-dealer must immediately notify the client that it cannot effect any further transactions.

I trust this is responsive to your inquiry. Please call with any questions.

Very truly yours,
